Thabazimbi – Brides all over the world were left heartbroken after they had to postpone their dream weddings due to the COVID-19 regulations. Amanda du Plessis was supposed to get married to the love of her life on 8 August 2020. “It was the ideal and a very special date on the calendar for me. If you have 20/20 vision, they say your sight is perfect. Because the eight resembles the infinity symbol, it would have represented our infinite love for each other,” she explained. Unfortunately, most of her family members reside in other provinces and there is so much uncertainty about the future – that the couple decided to rather postpone. Du Plessis said: “We want all of our family with us when we get married and due to the travel restrictions, we are not sure if it will be possible.” Until they have certainty, their special day has been put on hold. “I am so grateful for my mother and soon-to-be mother-in-law. My mother made me watch a video of Grace Kelly’s wedding and they really supported me throughout, helping me to stay positive,” she added. She would like to encourage other brides to stay positive and to remember that their fairytale day will come, and they will still have the opportunity to feel like a princess. Rise up, dust off your wedding shoes and go wash your hands! It is time to start re-planning. See this as a refreshed opportunity. You can save that little bit of extra money to maybe afford something that the wedding budget originally did not allow.

PROPERTIES ON SLOW ROAD TO ROCK BOTTOM

SA – The property research group Lightstone predicts that house prices will decline by 8.8% on average in the next few months and a 20% value loss for higher-end properties. This is in line with the Reserve Bank predicting a 7% shrink in the economy. Some economists think that a 10% shrink in the economy is more realistic. If that is the case, properties would lose at least 14.5% of their value, taking into account that at some point of time the reserve bank is going to normalise their repo rates. “This is partly due to pre-existing supply-demand imbalances (excess supply) and depressed sentiment. In contrast, we expect a relative resilience in the affordable market, partly due to a structural supply deficit (i.e., demand is higher than the available stock),” said Lightstone’s analytics director Paul-Roux de Kock. According to Private Property: “South Africans awaken to a reality that is cause for some anxiety, from a lagging economy, a Rand that tends to weaken more often than it strengthens and annual consumer price inflation dips.” Other factors might further drive down property prices, including the perception of or real political or economic instability. Economist John Loos of FNB says the recession is here for the long run. He predicts that even after lockdown has passed, the market will remain weak. He says the ‘rock bottom’ – which is theoretically the best time to buy a property, is still to come. Property investors are therefore in no rush to buy as this downward value spiral is predicted to carry on for the next few years.

En so storm die virus steeds verwoed voort ou grote. Miljarde rande word verloor en het dan tot gevolg dat benoude hase benoude spronge maak.

- ‘n Kwarteeu (25 jaar) gelede, was dit die begin van die ‘95 Rugby Wêreldbeker, ou grote. Dit was ‘n keerpunt in die geskiedenis van SA ruggas. Die Bokke se terugkeer na die internasionale arena en dan wen hulle somer die groot beker ook!
- Die WP se ondersteuners het ‘n geldige rede gekry om weer na grendelyd ‘n ou ietsie te vat, wettig. Die Kaapse goue seun, Pieter-Steph du Toit bly vir eers aan na sy mislike aanbod van Japan.
- Nóg twee spelers in die Kaap gaan Japan toe. Die belowende losskakel Jean-Luc du Plessis en die jong yster Kobus Wiese het besluit om hulle tasse te pak.

- Die Springbok haker, Bongi Mbonambi, se poging om Blou Bul land toe te gaan, het lelik misluk.
- Die Blou Bulle het ook hulle nuwe assistent en voorspeler coach bekend gemaak – Russell Winter gaan nou die sweep slaan in die Bul-kamp.
- Die Bulle se nuutste toevoeging op die inkopielys is Travis Ismaiel. Die begaafde speler is weer terug in Pretoria.
- Tot op hede is daar ook nog nie besluit of SA enige plaaslike grendel ruggas gaan sien nie.
- Die koue is op hande en in die hande is darem ‘n ietsie wat warm gaan maak, en dit is nie koffie nie... Veilig wees!

Nag ou grote...
