SA - The rules governing the interactions with law enforcement officials can be tricky for most. For people staying on farms and smallholdings [especially given the current political landscape] it can be downright intimidating. For those tilling the soil or anyone else upholding the law, understanding their rights, duties, and boundaries is paramount. As we navigate the intricate legal landscape, we must be aware of our rights to protect ourselves, our property and guard against unwarranted intrusion and harassment. In the same way police officers are bound by their duty to enforce the law, while also respecting the unique challenges and conditions faced by our community. This feature delves into some of the complexities of the law, casting light on what each side can rightfully expect from the other, aiming for harmonious coexistence and mutual respect. Recent news making headlines about farmers not getting what they bargained for when calling on SAPS has highlighted the need for our communities to brush up on several aspects of the law that might affect them. Having clarity about the law, responsibilities and expectations when dealing with SAPS can help you to ensure that your rights are respected. It can also prevent conflict and if all the parties of this delicate, but indispensable relationship keeps to their end of the bargain, it will also save all involved in legal fees and save SAPS millions in civil claims.

Many people have started to question their rights when it comes to protecting their property. With the purpose of gaining clarity, Platinum Weekly reached out to police spokesperson colonel Adele Myburgh and received the following answers to our questions:

1. Question: When a person phones in to report that someone has been caught for stock theft, and requests that SAPS must attend to the scene, would SAPS immediately inform the complainant on what time SAPS can be expected, and if there is someone immediately available to attend to the scene?

Answer: No, police attend to more than one scene at a time, and serious crimes, like a robbery in progress, murder in progress, serious motor vehicle accidents (where the road has been safe room, to prevent him/her to escape is permitted.

4. Question: Can SAPS restrain a person with handcuffs if the person resists arrest?

Answer: Yes, after an arrest a person must be handcuffed. Even if the person is initially calm, he/she can change their attitude/demeanour in a split second. This will also assist the officer to prevent the person from escaping and will help to keep everyone safe.

has probable cause to believe that a person was involved in the commission of a crime. Can probable cause be the word of another person who was caught committing a crime?

Answer: Police can arrest a person with or without a warrant if the officer witnesses him/her committing an offence or has probable cause to believe that a person was involved in the commission of a crime. "Probable cause" means that a police officer, prior to an arrest, must evaluate all the facts and circumstances known at that time, based on his own observation or trustworthy information. If an eyewitness reports on a crime which has already occurred, the eyewitness first needs to give a written statement made under oath and be willing to later testify in court, to give police probable cause to make an arrest.

7. Question: May SAPS enter and search a property without a warrant?

Answer: Yes. Law enforcement officers are allowed to search without a warrant if the officer is of the opinion that in any specific instance, he/she would be able to obtain a warrant, but because of the circumstances of that particular case, there will not be enough time to obtain one according to Section 22 of the Criminal Procedure Act. In other words, if a police official has a reasonable suspicion that property or certain people have just been involved in committing a crime or are plotting to do so, they have the right to search and seize such items from the perpetrators and arrest the perpetrators without a warrant to do so.

Myburgh also added that it is very important for those who respond to a crime scene, to not contaminate the scene of the crime. "Please, when you respond to a crime scene, do not touch, or move anything if possible. For example, investigations can be hindered when forensic evidence is unknowingly corrupted by responders."

The answers to some of these questions, might not be to your liking, but it is better to know what you can expect, even if it is to know that you cannot expect an answer, such as a response time. It is always highly recommended to keep track of communication and on the events as they unfold when any criminal acts are involved. Always prioritise safety, respect the law, and remain informed. As you will see in the answer to question 6. As an example, even if you have caught a person committing a crime... SAPS might find that person to be trustworthy and if that person goes on to give a written statement made under oath and be willing to later testify in court, such statement is enough probable cause for SAPS to arrest you, even if you initially reported a crime to SAPS and requested their assistance.

And they said beauty is in the eye of the beholder...

In our local communities, security groups, community leaders and SAPS are finding ways to strengthen ties in their collective fight against crime.

blocked) will be given preference if police can prevent the loss of human life. In a case where a citizen's arrest was made, it will be attended as soon as possible and is regarded as a serious incident, because a caught/detained person, can be dangerous and unstable.

2. Question: Would SAPS mind if the phone call to them is recorded?

Answer: No.

3. Question: Section 42 of the Criminal Procedure Act 51 of 1977 allows a private person to make an arrest in the following circumstances: A private person can arrest any person without a warrant – who commits or attempts to commit an offence in his presence or whom he reasonably suspects of having committed an offence. When a person makes such an arrest, would it be fine with SAPS if the person uses cable ties—seeing as most ordinary citizens do not have handcuffs—to restrain the arrested person if they resist arrest? If not, how should a person conducting a citizen's arrest restrain the person who is resisting arrest?

Answer: The person should always act in such a way that his own as well as the alleged suspect's life is protected. To restrain a person, by using cable ties or locking them in a

5. Question: Can a person who conducts a citizen's arrest fire a warning shot if the perpetrator tries to flee?

Answer: The firing of a warning shot is only permitted when a person may be lawfully shot as provided for in Section 49(2) of the Criminal Procedure Act. See attached Section 49(2) for your attention:

49. Use of force in effecting arrest

(2) If any arrestor attempts to arrest a suspect and the suspect resists the attempt, or flees, or resists the attempt and flees, when it is clear that an attempt to arrest him or her is being made, and the suspect cannot be arrested without the use of force, the arrestor may, in order to effect the arrest, use such force as may be reasonably necessary and proportional in the circumstances to overcome the resistance or to prevent the suspect from fleeing, but, in addition to the requirement that the force must be reasonably necessary and proportional in the circumstances, the arrestor may use deadly force only if—

(a) the suspect poses a threat of serious violence to the arrestor or any other person; or (b) the suspect is suspected on reasonable grounds of having committed a crime involving the infliction or threatened infliction of serious bodily harm and there are no other reasonable means of effecting the arrest, whether at that time or later.

6. Question: Your website reads that a person may be arrested either on the strength of a warrant of arrest, or when a police officer witnesses a person committing an offence or

SOULFOOD

PROVERBS 16

16 To humans belong the plans of the heart, but from the Lord comes the proper answer of the tongue.

2 All a person's ways seem pure to them, but motives are weighed by the Lord.

3 Commit to the Lord whatever you do, and he will establish your plans.

4 The Lord works out everything to its proper end—even the wicked for a day of disaster.

5 The Lord detests all the proud of heart.

Be sure of this: They will not go unpunished.

6 Through love and faithfulness sin is atoned for; through the fear of the Lord evil is avoided.

7 When the Lord takes pleasure in anyone's way, he causes their enemies to make peace with them.

8 Better a little with righteousness than much gain with injustice.

KEEP AN EYE OUT FOR SUSPICIOUS OBJECTS

Thabazimbi – Delmarie Harmse and her husband were taking a walk around their yard on Saturday afternoon 12 August 2023 when they discovered a marked skull on their trailer. The sight of the marked skull, said to be made of clay, made the Harmse's uneasy as they did not recognise the markings and couldn't understand what it indicated. "I reached out to various sources to find out what it meant," says Harmse, "Some said that it could be a sign that my house was marked as a possible target for robbery, while others indicated that it may be sorcery. It was a scary experience, but I know that God is with us, and He will protect us". Delmarie's husband has since burnt the skull. While the intent behind the marked skull remains a mystery, community members, especially those residing on Jasmine Street, are urged to be vigilant and regularly inspect their yards for suspicious objects.

The marked skull found in the Harmse's yard.

Fist-sized rock hits vehicle's windscreen

Thabazimbi – Hetta Nortier and her sister Annette Manser were travelling on the R510 from Northam to Thabazimbi on Wednesday 9 August 2023 when disaster struck. At approximately 13:00, about 15 kilometres from Thabazimbi, Hetta slowed down as a construction truck was moving slowly in front of them while construction workers collected road cones. From oncoming traffic another truck passed at a high speed, causing a fist-sized rock to hit Hetta's car's windscreen. The sisters sustained light in injuries from the shards of glass, but fortunately, the rock remained lodged in the windscreen. Hetta posted the incident on the 'Thaba ons dorp' WhatsApp group and group members quickly helped by telling Hetta which parties to reach out to. Hetta has since been in communication with the right channels, and negotiations regarding her windscreen's repair are underway.

Fortunately the rock remained lodged in the windscreen.

BEHIND THE DOOR

Thabazimbi – I recently saw a video on social media where a woman addressed an interesting issue regarding restrooms and children. She explained that she was at a park with her family, and when she went to the park's restroom, she discovered that a man was inside the single restroom waiting behind the door. The mother explained that before the man made his quick exit, he seemed quite annoyed at her having discovered him. She then returned to her family and sat on a park bench while keeping an eye on the restroom. She noticed that many young girls entered the restroom without their parents, and it dawned on her that the man had possibly been waiting for a child to enter! She then urged parents to accompany their kids to public restrooms and check behind the doors before letting their kids go in. Although this happened overseas, we need to be alert even if we feel safe in a small town as we need to remind ourselves that this could happen anywhere. Most parents might assume that their children are safe to use public restrooms if they watch them enter and exit. But the truth is that once your child goes inside and is confronted by such a deviant predator, your child will not be the same person after leaving the restroom. This video was an eye-opener for me, and I hope that this letter reaches enough parents to raise their awareness. We never know what is lurking behind the door...

YOUR FRIDAY FUN FACT

Did you know?

Great White Sharks are not kept in captivity, for a multitude of reasons; critically, they do not survive. Scientists and biologists around the world have tried various methods of breeding and introducing Great White Sharks into captivity but without much luck. One of the many reasons is that they get depressed in captivity; they have been known to head butt their noses into the glass walls and lose their appetites. It has also been noted that they get increasingly aggressive in their depressed state.
